

At U.S. PIRG, we had a busy summer working on our top campaigns: We urged McDonald's to get our life-saving antibiotics out of its entire meat supply chain; called on states to ban Roundup, which has been linked to cancer; and published a shopper's guide for buying non-toxic school supplies.

On these issues and others, our mission is to champion the public interest – to raise our voices on behalf of the public when decisions are being made that affect our health, our safety or our rights.

Right now, we are hiring a team of fellows to join our 2019 class. Fellows mobilize the support it takes to win a specific campaign, whether it's zeroing out plastic waste, ensuring that our food or transportation systems are healthy and sustainable, or calling on manufacturers to remove toxic chemicals from their consumer products. Interested students can go to jobs.uspirg.org to learn more and apply.
