

Rowan University: Clinical Health And Social Experiences (CHASE) Research Team at Rowan University. Rowan University's Ph.D. program in clinical psychology offers a specific focus on health psychology and behavioral medicine, with training experiences to prepare students for work in integrated care environments (research, teaching, and clinical intervention). Dr. Dani Arigo is seeking students who are interested in studying one or more of the following: • Social influences on health and health behaviors • Digital health tools (smartphone apps, wearables, social media) • Women's health (during college, pregnancy, and midlife) • Behavioral and psychosocial interventions to promote physical activity, healthy eating, or chronic illness self-management Students admitted to work with Dr. Arigo and the CHASE lab will have opportunities to engage in ongoing projects focused on (1) understanding psychological and social influences on physical activity, and (2) designing digital tools to improve health behaviors. Applications to the Ph.D. program are due January 1, 2019. Interested applicants should contact Dr. Arigo at arigo@rowan.edu before submitting, to discuss these and other opportunities. Read more about Dr. Arigo's research at:

https://academics.rowan.edu/csm/_docs/psychology/arigo_dani_profile_10-18.pdf#Profile. Apply to Rowan's clinical psychology Ph.D. program:

<https://academics.rowan.edu/csm/departments/psychology/clinical/index.html>