School Psychology Scholarship

The Queens College School Psychology Program will offer two $2,500 scholarships to support incoming students who are African American/Black and/or Asian American and commit to pursuing the Bilingual Extension in School Psychology or the Multicultural Specialization. Consistent with the Queens College Strategic Goal of increasing diversity on campus, as well as calls for racial/ethnic diversification of school psychologists, our program aims to increase representation of school psychologists from these specific demographics who are trained to serve an increasingly diverse school-age population. To apply for the scholarships, applicants must:

- Submit a graduate admissions application to the Queens College School Psychology Program for Fall 2019 matriculation by March 1, 2019;
- Be accepted into the Queens College School Psychology Program for the 2019-2020 academic year;
- Complete a scholarship application which requires applicants to address why they are interested in obtaining the Bilingual Extension in School Psychology or the Multicultural Specialization; and
- Commit to enrolling in the Bilingual Extension in School Psychology or the Multicultural Specialization.
