Pre-Requisite: Psychology 321 (Social Psychology)

Course description: This course examines social psychological theories and research on how gender shapes self-conceptions and social interactions across many domains. Topics include evolutionary versus cultural accounts of gender phenomena, how and why attitudes toward the other gender are ambivalent, and the ways in which even positive female stereotypes tend to uphold the gender status quo. We consider how prescriptive stereotypes (“gender rules”) result in social disapproval for gender deviance (e.g., backlash against powerful women), and examine how gendered attitudes play out in the workplace and in romantic relationships. Finally, what are the prospects for continued change in gender roles, stereotypes, hierarchy, and sex differences in social behavior? Has the gender revolution stalled, ended, reversed? Or is it continuing on a slow or fast trajectory? How optimistic or pessimistic should we be and why?

Goals: To provide an engaging, integrative, and broad overview of gender-related theory and research that can help students to understand the complex cross-currents underlying modern day gender relations and incorporate gender into their own areas of research interest.

Readings: To provide both a broad overview as well as detail on specific topics, the readings include a primary text (co-authored by your instructor) and outside readings comprising a mix of chapters from edited volumes, empirical journal articles, and review articles. All of the outside readings and assignments will be provided at Sakai.rutgers.edu. Login with NetID and password, click on class website (Gender is in the title). Print out the syllabus if you want a hard copy. You are obliged to buy (or borrow from the library) the required text, available in paperback at Livingston Book Store or Internet sites.

Course Evaluation. Course grade (150 points) will be based on class participation and assignments (90 points, or 60%), and a final paper (60 points, or 40%). There are no exams. Bring your written assignments to class on the day they are due and be prepared to discuss. Late assignments will not be credited. If you have to miss class, e-mail me your assignment by class time. For all written assignments, please double space and use only the APA-approved font (12-point Times New Roman). See the last page of your syllabus for how grades are assigned.

Research paper. The final paper is due on Mon, May 7th (e-mail it to me no later than 5 pm that day). This assignment requires you to write an analysis of any theoretical or applied gender issue that you find interesting. To do so, choose an outside reading from the provided list of suggested texts. I welcome your own ideas for a text, but do clear it with me. Aim for around 10 double-spaced pages. High scorers integrate the material from your chosen text with the concepts discussed in class. Early papers always welcomed. Last page of syllabus has details.

Demonstrate that you can apply “gender lenses” to independent reading by selecting a text and, in a glorified book report, synthesizing it with concepts you've learned from the course. There is a list of suggested texts at the course site under Assignments, but you can choose your own if you clear it with me. Style: Formal essay, but not “APA format” except that you need to cite your references on a separate page (aim for at least three references). Mechanics: Double spaced, Times New Roman, 12-point font, 6-10 pages maximum.

Grading policies: Total points possible = 150. Extra credit is not an option. There are 9 Assignments worth 10 points each, and a final paper worth 60 points. Grades will be based on a percentage system (not a curve). The percentages (and total points) needed for your final grade are as follows: 90%=A (135), 85% = B+ (128), 80% =B (120), 75% = C+ (113), 70%=C (105), 55% = D (83).
